Born in Sydney, and brought up a fishing rod's flick from the harbour, Donna Wheeler knew her Darlinghurst days were numbered when she first set eyes upon a fog-clad St Kilda Pier as a teenage art student. There have been stints in New York, London and rural Ireland, but Melbourne's art scene, bands, bars, coffee and wry sense of self has held her wandering eye for almost two decades. Donna has commissioned food guides and online features for Lonely Planet and has worked as a digital producer, content strategist and art director. She has studied visual arts, English literature and is a graduate of RMIT's Professional Writing and Editing program. She now devotes her time to freelance writing and editing.

Like all Lonely Planet Books, it is very informative and has great suggestions on what to see and do there. I started using them when I saw them listed on Rick Steves websites.

Love the availability

This was informative and well written. I found the DK Eyewitness Guide did a slightly better job of covering the things I was most interested in, but the two Guides complemented one another.

I am finding this book extremely useful in planning an upcoming trip to Tunisia. The only thing missing is an index like other Lonely Planet guide books have.

A bit outdated--2010 revised publication date--but accurate. More maps would have helped, especially of Tunis.

Excellent

Good guide.

This was not available in the local book stores. No Tunisia book was. It did do a good job of informing me so our trip would be enhanced. I am glad I have it.
